Becoming a Sailor

by Laura Brazil

I really have had my share of "scary" sailing adventures. Heck! For me, scary boat incidents/accidents go all the way back to when Rich and I were first dating & I sunk his aluminum fishing boat in the Petaluma River. It was sort of his fault, but since he wasn't in the boat at the time, I don't think he would quite agree... it was on me. That left a bad taste in my mouth, not to mention a feeling of inadequacy. I was terrified of steering with a tiller-WHY don't boats have regular steering wheels and brakes? It would make driving a boat so much more pleasant!

Then there was the first time we ever sailed on the Bay with friends. We left Sausalito with Mimosas in our hands and ended up with the boat at such a heel, all I could do was pray, and God forbid someone would need me to do anything besides hold on! I thought our son would be orphaned for sure, it seemed like we were going so fast, and all I could do was look down at the rails and the Bay waters rushing by.

Years later, Rich had a hankering to buy a sailboat to use in Clearlake. He found a pretty inexpensive Hunter 20 in good condition and somehow convinced me to sail again with him. How bad could it be, I thought? After all, it was just a Lake. I was a Lifeguard and not afraid of the water, just scared to death of having to handle a boat! –did I mention this boat had a tiller AND sails? So, you guessed it, our very first sail together went terribly wrong AGAIN, with a minor malfunction and a sudden change of wind speed and direction. I was left with only two choices-neither of which I wanted to do. Take the tiller (Oh, HECK no!) or go to the bow of the listing boat and take down the sail? I preferred choice #3-jump in and swim. But no, I didn't do that. Holding back tears, and with deep breaths, I made it forward and let down the sail, which instantly made everything quieter and calmer. We fixed our malfunction and motored back to the dock. I didn't sail much more on that boat; it was Rich's thing.

A few years later, though, Rich and I, along with some close friends, decided to rent a catamaran and take sailing lessons in Anacortes, Washington. Rich furthered his sailing courses, and I started mine. The catamaran was Rich's idea because they are so stable, and he thought I would love it. It was a great trip, I did love it, and even though we had a horrible instructor aboard with us, I managed to pass my sailing course in a weekend, and Rich furthered his credentials to Captaining and being able to charter boats anywhere in the world.

Rich and I both loved to go to Boat shows and read Latitude 38 monthly. (These were a safe, fun alternative to being on a sailboat for me) And, I believe it was because of Latitude 38 that Rich got the idea to crew for someone on a Baja Haha. (The two-week sailboat regatta from San Diego to Cabo) Rich did his first Haha without me in 2014, and of course, convinced me the following year to do it as crew along with him. It was an exciting trip, with four other people who already knew the boat we were on, our course, and the Captain. It wasn't what I'd expected at times, in that it got rough and even hard to stay in our small bunk, but again, the crew and the boat were all very capable.

When we landed in Cabo, I realized that I didn't feel like I had done much other than cook meals, do dishes, and keep my night watch partner awake. I still didn't feel like I was skillful enough to handle a 50ft sailboat.

And so, we did the Haha again in 2016, but this time on a very large Catamaran with pretty much all the bells and whistles available to make it easier to sail. It was also the first time I got to do my night watches with Rich. He is so patient and calm with me. He explains concepts in different ways so that I can relate, unlike the sailing instructor I had who just screamed the same thing louder each time I didn't understand what he was saying. It was a completely different trip; although it was the same course, I started to actually feel more useful on the boat and finally understood more about the wind and the sails.

One night on this trip, we had a boat emergency requiring "all hands on deck"-you never want to hear this phrase in the middle of the night! We all scrambled up on deck (me, with my now bleeding black eye, having run smack into the corner cabinet of our berth on my way up) only to find chaos, with plenty of very loud wind.

Our headsail furling drum had come loose, and the HUGE jib sail was half on the boat and half in the water-all very dangerous things, needless to say. It was terrifying for all of us, especially watching the three men harnessed to the boat and out on the trampoline, trying to pull the jib out of the water, all the while dodging the head high, wildly swinging, furling drum. It seemed to have taken almost an hour before all was calm again.

By the time we came back on watch an hour or so later the seas had calmed, and we were motoring. It was a particularly quiet and solemn watch and quite peaceful after just hours ago being afraid that the sea was going to take us down. This was when Rich sadly looked at me and said, "I know... you don't want a sailboat; you want a Stagecoach!" I laughed at that one and told him, no, you're wrong. We discussed what had gone awry and why we wouldn't have let that happen if this were our boat- we agreed. We thought that we had come up with the name of our boat that night, too, "Stagecoach." LOL.

Not long after that, we started looking for our own perfect boat.

Rich knew precisely what we wanted in a sailboat. About 42 feet, a skeg hung rudder and a modified keel, with large water and diesel holding tanks, and no more than a 6' draft. He found Tally Ho after seriously searching for a couple of years. We bought her at the end of 2017 and decided to get to know her well and sail her as often as possible in the San Francisco Bay. We did that and had a few minor things redone for safety on the boat. Our plan was to take Tally Ho and four others as crew on the Haha. We would then sail her to Puerto Vallarta, where we would leave Tally Ho until we retired and able to sail up and down the Sea of Cortez.

Completing the 2019 Baja Haha is another six-week story of adventure in and of itself. By the time we sailed into Cabo, a major tropical storm was about to hit. The port was closed just hours after we found a spot to tuck Tally Ho in between two Pirate ships. (SERIOUSLY!) The celebratory champagne was poured for all once Rich miraculously squeezed us into our spot.

Typically Rich is the toast maker in our family...he is poetic and quick with perfect words off the top of his head. I don't quite remember all that he said, but he talked about the many challenges in the last six weeks, about our often seasick but willing crew, and how proud we both were of each of them and that we arrived together safely and with no harm done to Tally Ho or the crew. Then Rich turned to me at the end of his toast and thanked me for all I had done and been through to get us here to this moment, knowing that this adventure hadn't started out to be "my thing" at all. He thanked me too, and I knew how emotional he felt because I did too. It was a BIG deal to come so far! We did it! When he could speak again, he asked me, "Do you have anything to add? ". I looked at him and our crew, and with my glass raised, I blurted out, "I'm an f-ing Sailor!"

Shrimp Fajitas

This is a great recipe for outdoor gatherings or sports event buffet like the Super Bowl. It can be made into a taco with great Mexican flavors and a lighter fare using shrimp and no cheese. This can be made a day ahead and heated before serving giving the party host time to be with their guests. It is easily expanded to serve 8 or 12 simply by increasing the ingredients and following the same recipe. I apologize for not having a picture to show you.

Ingredients:

- | | |
|---|---|
| ⚓ 1 tsp. ground cumin | ⚓ 1 large yellow onion, sliced through the stem end into thin wedges. |
| ⚓ 1 tsp. garlic powder | ⚓ 2 medium bell peppers, cored, seeded and sliced into thin strips |
| ⚓ 1 tsp ground pepper | ⚓ Warmed flour tortillas |
| ⚓ 1 tsp kosher salt | ⚓ 1/4 cup packed fresh cilantro leaves |
| ⚓ 1 tsp. chili powder | ⚓ 1 lime cut into wedges |
| ⚓ 1 tsp. brown sugar | ⚓ Sour cream (optional) |
| ⚓ 1/4 tsp. dried oregano | |
| ⚓ 1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil + 2 table-spoons | |
| ⚓ 2 cloves garlic, peeled and smashed | |
| ⚓ 1 ½ pounds shrimp, 21 – 25 count, shelled, deveined and rinsed. | |

Combine the cumin, garlic powder, pepper, salt, brown sugar and oregano in a Ziploc bag for the spice mix.

In a medium bowl mix 1/4 cup oil with all but 1 table-spoon of the spice mix.

Add smashed garlic and shrimp; toss to coat. (can marinate for several hours for more flavor if desired)

Heat a large skillet over medium-high heat. When hot add remaining 2 tablespoons of oil.

Add onion wedges and sauté until softened and starting to brown.

Add bell pepper and remaining spice mix and continue to sauté until tender.

Transfer to bowl.

Return skillet to heat and add shrimp. Cook stirring frequently until cooked through.

Add sautéed vegetables and toss to coat.

Transfer to large serving platter and serve with warmed tortillas, cilantro, lime wedge for squeezing and sour cream.

Sunshine and Birthdays

by Sunshine Reporter Rosemary Hart

Hello all!

We've made it to Freedom Day – June 15th. With luck we will put this pandemic in the rear-view mirror! Then, once again we can celebrate with the Cruise-In Yacht Club Members. But BIG KUDOS must go out to those PYC members that made Memorial Day Weekend memorable for our visitors to the Petaluma dock.

Kevin and I had the honor to join Jill, Garrett and Nicole as taste testers for the annual Memorial Day Drink and Appetizer contest. Mac had prepared a rigorous list of the categories that we were to use in our judging of the contestants. So, on we went...

13 drinks and appetizers later, we added up the points (not easy after 13 drinks) and determined our winners. Thank you all who participated! It was fun to meet all the contestants, and to hear some of their stories. Let's review the grand prize winners.

1st place went to Michael and Jen of the Cavalino (and their friend Ann who we don't think helped to create either the drinks or appetizers but was wonderful at dancing on their deck.) Michael and Jen created a MexicaLei drink – a margarita with a Hawaiian twist and a jalapeño kick. Their yacht was amazing, and we were treated like royalty – seated and served delicious Hawaiian appetizers upon china with silver and a few extra sips of ultra-premium Tequilas that they had on board.

2nd place went to Matt, Courtney, Nate and Ella aboard Tusk for their Fighting Ray drink. I think the judges all loved this cocktail the best. As best we can remember (drink #11) it muddled together strawberry Waterloo sparkling water, mint, jalapeño, Bullit Bourbon, and Rosé with a drop of simple syrup. They named it the Fighting Ray because of a skirmish they got into with a ray on their travels up the Petaluma River. Matt and Courtney served our drinks, and young Nate was very maître d' adept at serving the appetizers.

3rd place went to Cathy, Mark, and dog Bailey aboard Scully Banks for their delicious Cardinal Rules cocktail. Coconut rum, triple sec, lemon juice and the splash of grenadine to add the "cardinal" red to the drink. This drink was in tribute Cathy's alma mater, Stanford. The Scully Bank's team received extra special points for their smoked tuna belly appetizer. Yum!

We also need to Honorably Mention our own Francesca of the Lady Francesca. Not only was her drink – the River City Rip Tide – and her appetizers delicious, and her enthusiasm infectious, but she was also our wonderful host while down on the dock – keeping us hydrated and letting us store our carried items while we were judging.

Worth mentioning too were Forrest and Linda Blue on Blue Crew. They went through SO much to get the ingredients for the 5 Alarm Blue Refresher drink and (because Mac had proclaimed that bribes were recommended in his Drink Contest Rule Announcement) there was a $5 wrapper on the drink glass to make the drink a true 5 Alarm. We left the $5 bills to be donated to Forrest's Firemen Funds except for one $5 bill which we brought back to young Nate from Tusk as a tip for his exceptional wait service!

Ahoy!

What a month it has been at PYC. Memorial weekend was great due largely to the hospitality of McKenzie & Francesca Smith. Everyone had a great time even though PYC was closed. I even had the opportunity to expand the Petaluma Navy by adding several new Rear Admirals. Marilyn & I passed out cookies, which were well received.

Our first general meeting in over a year was a huge success. It was really great seeing everyone again. Francesca Smith put together an amazing dinner catered by Daniel at Boulevard Café. Al Alys gave a wonderful tribute to Harold Niles and the 8 bells ceremony was very moving. We also inducted new PYC members Matt & Kelli Riveras and Bob & Alexi Buhner – Welcome!

PYC will be finally opening up very soon! We have established some protocols for our member's safety and health. For our visiting guests, I updated the sign in sheet by adding a "vaccinated" column. A sign will be posted "No Vaccine - Mask Required" on the front door.

I was very disappointed to have to cancel the Delta cruise this year. Hopefully, next year we will be able to assemble a proper fleet for the Delta adventure.

Looking forward to seeing everyone at the next general meeting BBQ dinner July 9, when we will also be honoring Gloria Roberts with the 8 bells ceremony.

Let the adventure continue!

Hot weather, BBQ's and lots and lots of Boating That's definitely what June has been and July will be in the Petaluma Turning Basin. As other articles in this newsletter will attest, the Memorial Day Cruise In's were a delight for PYC members and the entire City. The long summer will certainly bring more of the same! The turning basin has hosted a little over 100 boats to date (in 2021) and based on reservations (that just keep coming,) we will more than match that in the second half of the year! The number of people on those boats have likely numbered in the many hundreds. It's so great to be welcoming mariners from all over the Bay Area to our City. Incoming clubs will be especially delighted now that PYC is open!

Rental Note - The board has approved the following rentals: Garrett Hill for the afternoon of Thursday, July 22nd. Leland Fishman for the afternoon of Wednesday, August 25th.
